LEADING THE TEAM

Chow Weijie

Creative director / Lead strategist

Weijie is passionate about solving problems with visual communication and technology. His most recent adventure was to commercialise local humour platform SGAG and provides strategic direction to all commercial projects since early 2013. Prior to Zhouee, he freelanced in media and advertising companies since 2006. He was also creative partner of local web studio ReddotCreation and associate new media director at local advertising agency 360 Communications. With a hands-on approach, he has worked on web and mobile projects in Thailand and Singapore since 2008. Weijie was educated at NUS (Singapore), in New Media and Technopreneurship.

+65 9789 4193 / cd@zhouee.com

Azmie Suhaimi

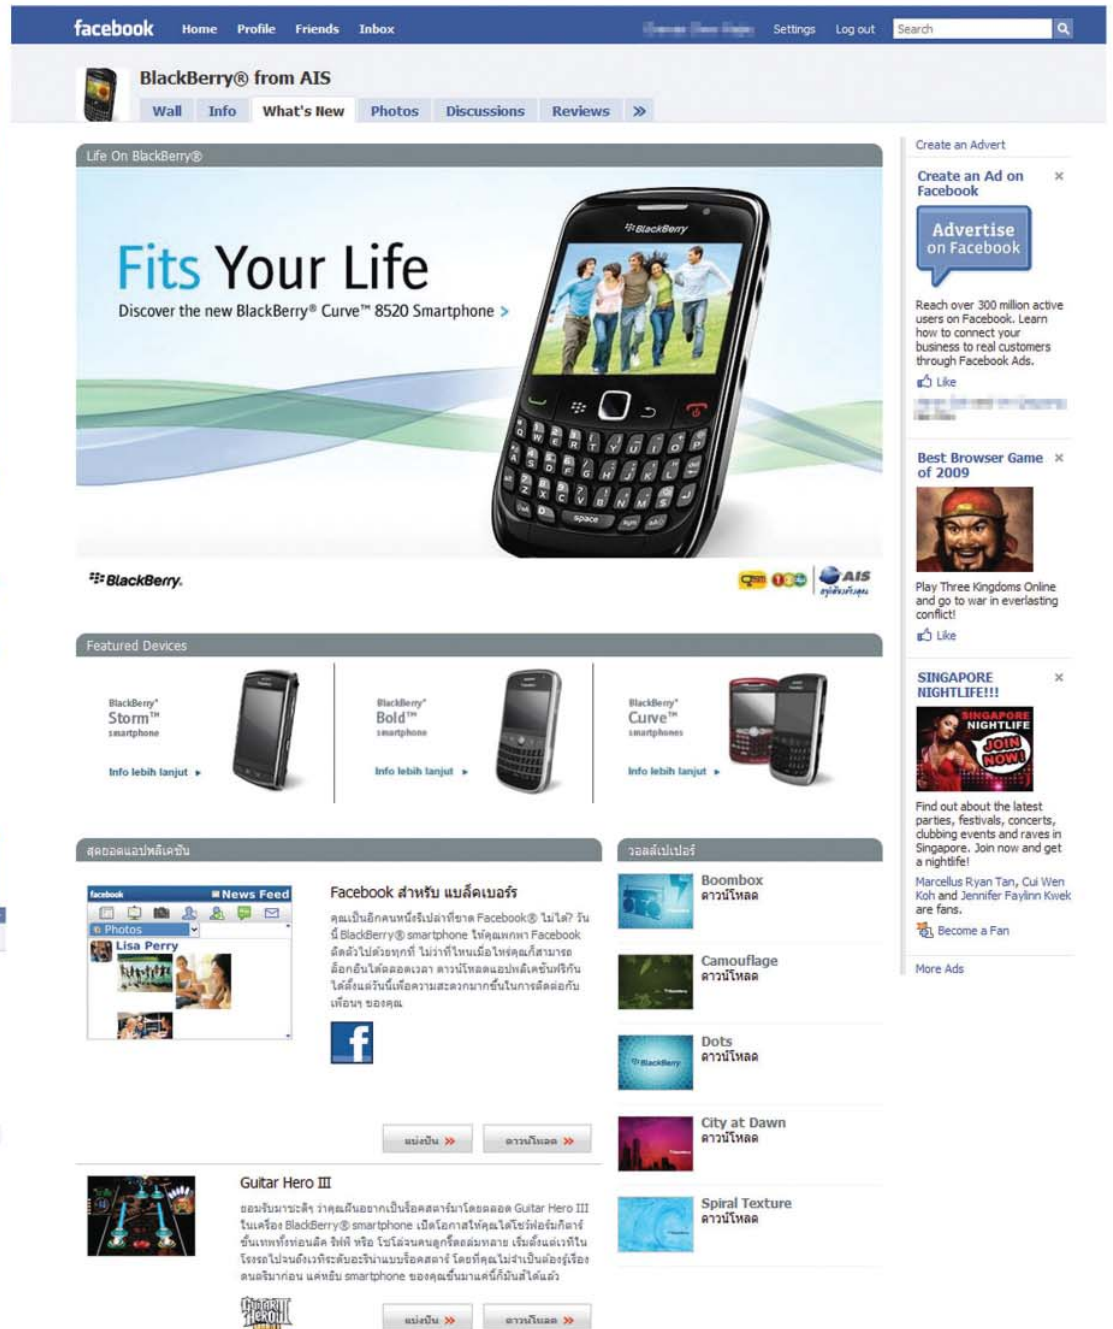

Associate account director / Lead strategist

Azmi is passionate about connecting social behaviour & lifestyles with businesses and making it matter to them. His most recent adventure was to help a regional tech startup Hotel Quickly achieve 200,000+ sign ups in less than a year via his twitter, instagram and facebook engagement campaigns as its Co-Founder & Head of Social Media. Prior to that, he provided leadership to Zalora Singapore's social team to lead and run campaigns which resulted in 1000+% growth in the facebook community within less than a year; and doubling direct revenue. He began his career servicing accounts under global advertising agency BBDO, and achieved Effie silver & bronze for brands under his charge in 2011. Azmie was educated at NUS (Singapore), in New Media and Communications.

Zalora Singapore hi everyone, we are an e-retailer hence we do not have a physical store. However, we do have free delivery available, 30 days free returns & cash on delivery for your convenience. Check out our site: <http://zlrsg.com/1b1GU3C> Thanks!

JUST UNDO IT: HOW TO TRANSFORM YOUR HOODIE INTO A COMPUTER SLEEVE

1. FLAT YOUR HOODIE ON A TABLE AND PLACE YOUR PC ON IT

2. FOLD UP

3. WRAP AROUND

4. TAKE THE HOOD

5. PLACE IT OVER THE PC

6. TIE THE STRINGS

7. TAKE THE SLEEVES

8. TANGLE THEM

9. GO TO WORK!

TYPE OF SHOOTERS

DIDN'T KNOW THERE ARE THESE FEW TYPES OF SHOOTERS UNTIL RECENTLY

One shot one kill...

NINJA SNIPER

Only realized they are there after you have been knocked out by them

Mai shoot me leh

KIASI IDIOT

Always hide behind something and play the game like a sissy

Look like Andy Lau bo?

MOVIE STAR WANNABE

Pattern more than badminton trying to mimic movie stars pose during game

Ok we flank them on the left

GARANG SOLDIER

Play the game like going to war, talk attacking tactics, plan strikes

Wah lau wasted man

BOBO SHOOTER

Best to act as bad guys in the movies.. 0% accuracy regardless how close

HAHA Come lah

KIASU JERK

Always have extra weapon, extra bullets and extra lives...

LOOK SG Civil Defence Force's wicked sense of humour

Seems like the Singapore Civil Defence Force has a wicked sense of humor.

A recent exchange between SCDF and popular troll site SGAG has gone viral after SCDF decided to follow the SGAG on its Twitter account.

SGAG then tweeted: 'The @SCDF just followed SGAG on Twitter. Well, umm, thank you? I'll call u when my cat gets stuck on the tree?'

This was met with a response by SCDF saying: "Cats are too adorable. You know our number @SGAG_SG: #995"

SCDF then compiled the conversation posting on its Facebook page with the caption:

"When Singapore finest rescuers meets Singapore finest trolls, 'hilarity ensues'... all done in good sport. Hope you guys enjoy reading the conversation!"

SCDF could not get back with a response at the time of writing.

How to avoid social media awkwardness

Sponsored by Digital Arts Network

When it comes to brand-on-brand interaction on social media, there is no hard and fast rule, as some have looked for. But as many will find, here's where social awkwardness will cost you the most.

In fact, many brands are pushing the envelope in their communications with consumers – with the likes of Oreo, Taco Bell and Scoot finding it to their advantage to get catty with users even.

(Read also: Why it pays to be catty on Twitter)

Locally, the brand with a sense of humor has been Scoot. The brand has had its fair share of brand-on-brand interplays with SGAG on Facebook earlier this year when it had promotional fares to Korea and China during periods when traveling to these areas were of high risk.

The most recent engagement with SGAG was when SGAG asked its fan base to help name Scoot's name its sixth aircraft.

"We have been 'trolled' a few times by SGAG and have been pretty sporting and played along with SGAG with candid and funny responses," Sharon Koh, marketing manager of Scoot said.

Click here to see Scoot's interaction on SGAG:

It works because of Scoot's brand image of being fun and quirky, she added.

Koh also added that social media today is crowded with lots of messages being pushed out almost every second.

"Today marketers face the challenge of having his/her brand messages noticed and retained on social media and people will tend to ignore brand messages which they see over and over again," she said.

WATER
OF LIFE

WEEK THREE

LOWLAND
An excellent introduction to the world of Scotch whisky, Lowland drams tend to be light and dry with some distilleries using triple distillation, though the use of larger stills supports some slightly spirituous notes. Many distilleries in the region were mothballed or closed long ago but a few are still active, including Auchentoshan, Glenkinchie and Bladnoch, Scotland's most southern distillery. The region is also home to a number of grain distilleries, which produce spirit for use in blends.

HIGHLAND
The Highlands is a vast region, with a vast range of whisky flavour characteristics – more of an 'everything that's left' than a region with a style of its own. Some of the distilleries produce a characteristic spicy style and have distinctive salty coastal influence, while others are laden with honey and heather. A few even produce peated varieties, a style most people associate with Islay. As a general rule, they are light to medium bodied and a little sweeter than their Lowland cousins.

SPEYSIDE
These drams have a reputation for sweetness and they range from light to rich, heavy, and distinctly sherried. Though small, bounded by Inverness and Aberdeen in the Grampian Mountains, the region is densely populated with 84 working distilleries and produces vast quantities of single malt. Always at the forefront of Scotland's whisky industry, this enclave was a haven for illicit spirit production after England began imposing excise in 1823 thanks rugged to isolation and a plentiful supply of fresh water. Over time, many of the distilleries became legitimate, most notably The Glenlivet.

ISLAND
Island whiskies are a disparate group, stretching from the Orkney Islands off Scotland's north coast, through Skye, Arran and Tobermory off the west coast, down to Arran in the south west where a distillery was built as recently as the 1990's. Again, there is considerable variation of style, but many are renowned for salty and seaweed characteristics, largely influenced by their proximity to the sea and the belligerent Scottish weather. They also tend to have some moderate peaty characteristics, though not to the extent of Islay whiskies.

ISLAY
The island of Islay (pronounced eye-lah) is a region unto itself, with a high concentration of distilleries and infamy for a heavily peated style. Love them or hate them, peated whiskies have a strong following and no tasting of Scotch whisky is complete without one. The distinctive flavour, often described as peaty, smoky or medicinal, comes from the malting process.

With different practices, processes and climates, different regions of Scotland can produce very different whiskies, with light and delicate whiskies from the lowlands and intensely smoky whiskies from Islay.

Tonight we will travel through five whisky regions to taste the differences for ourselves and understand what exactly is behind those differences.

Isle of Jura
Single Malt Scotch Whisky

In a world of its own.

Nestled off the west coast of Scotland, the Isle of Jura is a place rich in legend yet shrouded in mystery. A place where good fortune holds a grip over the Islanders, and the three highly distinctive Paps of Jura cast a long and foreboding shadow over the landscape.

There is no whisky and no island quite like Jura. It truly is in a world of its own.
